Hue and cry, An, after conscience.

Dunton, John, Rector of Aston Clinton. 1628-1676. G.389b.58

An hue and cry after conscience: or the pilgrims progress by candle-light in search after honesty and plain-dealing. Represented under the similitude of a dream, wherein is discovered the pritty manner of his setting out, his pleasant humours on his journey. The disappointment he met with after all his search. Together with his flight at last into another country where he is still on his rambles. Written by John Dunton, author of the Pilgrims Guide, from the cradle to his death-bed.

— Boston, Printed by John Allen, for Nicholas Boone, . . . 1720.
(1), 151, (1) pp. 14 cm., in 6s.

The book was completed and edited by the author's son, John Dunton, 1659-1733.

This card was printed at the Boston

Public Library, June 1, 1915.

1. The first part of the document is a letter from the President of the United States to the Congress, dated January 1, 1861. It is a formal address, and it is the first of its kind since the signing of the Constitution. The President, James Buchanan, is addressing the Congress, and he is doing so in a very formal and dignified manner. He is discussing the state of the Union, and he is also discussing the issue of slavery. He is saying that the Union is in a state of peril, and that he is doing everything in his power to preserve it. He is also saying that he is not going to interfere with the rights of the States, and that he is not going to interfere with the rights of the people. He is saying that he is going to do everything in his power to preserve the Union, and that he is going to do everything in his power to preserve the rights of the States and the people.
